War with China

Reasons behind The war :

- When we discuss about the 1962 war we need to know that what were the reasons behind the war :-

- The Himalyan Territory was a major conflict due to which the war arosed. Jawarhal Lal Nehru the prime Minister (PM) of India had also made some mistakes.

- However, the war was backed up by the Sino-Indi-an boder conflict which a ongoing territorial dispute. This conflict between 2 nations has started from the legacy of British colonial-era border agreements, if particular then the McMahon line in the Eastern sector which drawn during 1914 on the Simla convection.

War between the 2 nations :-

War begins:

→ The 1962 Sino-Indian war was fought in both of the disputed areas. Chinese attacked Indian post in Ladakh in west, they also crossed the McMahon line in the East

There was a border clash in 1967 in region of the state Sikkim, even if there being an agreed border in that region.

In the years 2013 and 1987 potential conflicts over the lines of Actual control were sucessfully de-escalated.

Border Clashes:

Earlier also, In series of border clashes between the 2 countries after the 1959 Tibetan Uprising, this was when India had granted asylum to Dalai Lama.

The actions of Chinese military action grew increasingly agressive after the rejection of Chinese diplomatic settlements in 1960-1962. As the Cuban Missle Crisis, seeing that the U.S.A was pre-occupied dealing with it.

China had also abandoned all the attempts for the peaceful resolutions, (20 october 1962).

Chinese troops have Indian forces to be pushed back in both theatres, capturing all of their claimed territory in western regions.

Tawang Theatre in the Eastern Region was also one of the problems.
Arunchal Pradesh has been administered by Indian government but, it has been claimed by the Chinese. The Northen-East region has always been a major problem due to which boder clashes occured.

Political Situation of both the Countries:-
Pandit Jawahal Lal Nehru (The Prime minister of India during the war). He had been a key element in decision making of Indian government.
The Army Chief of India was K.M. Karriapa. He was later also promoted to the rank of Feild Marshal.

Pandit Jawahal Lal Nehru (PM) also made some of the un-nessecary decisions which were not important and to be done. But he made of Number of bad decisions in oder to improve the diplomatic relations with the country of china.
He had blindly trusted china and shifted all of the armed forces to Pakiston boder. This was one of the reasons due to which India had lost one of the wars.

Why India Lost the War?

There were several reasons due to which India had lost the 1962 India-China war some of them include:

- Blind Trust by Nehru on China.
- Lack of equipment and troops and armoury on the Chinese front
- The weaponry budget for the army at that time was very low almost 50 million dollars. Due to which they could not buy latest machines.

Countries which Supported India and How?

One of the major countries who supported India was Soviet Union (USSR) they sold their MIG-21 fighter jet technology to India in lower cost still the Indians could not buy enough MIG-21 fighter jets needed in the war.

Villages which were captured and killed :-

The villages which were captured included many but the most deadly and painful one was the tribal village which was in North-East in Andhra Pradesh, The people living there were killed in different ways like the men were shot and women were raped and killed. Even the children were not spared the injured them by throwing stones and killing them.

What happened in after the war?
The after war story is quite intresting, the border conflict with the Chinese was still not sorted, it was actually more promoted

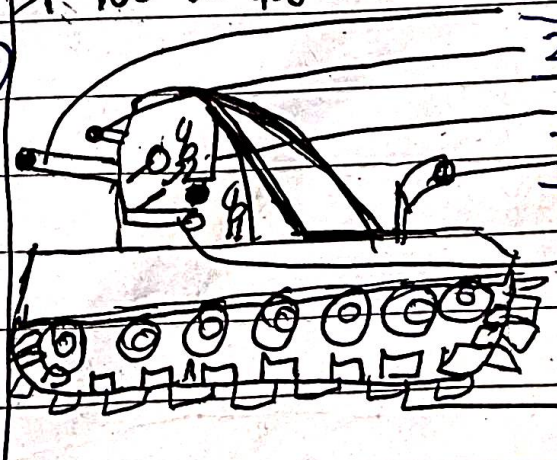
The ground bombers used to destroy ground-targets.

A engine which released energy and steam

The missiles (air-to air) used in aerial warfare.

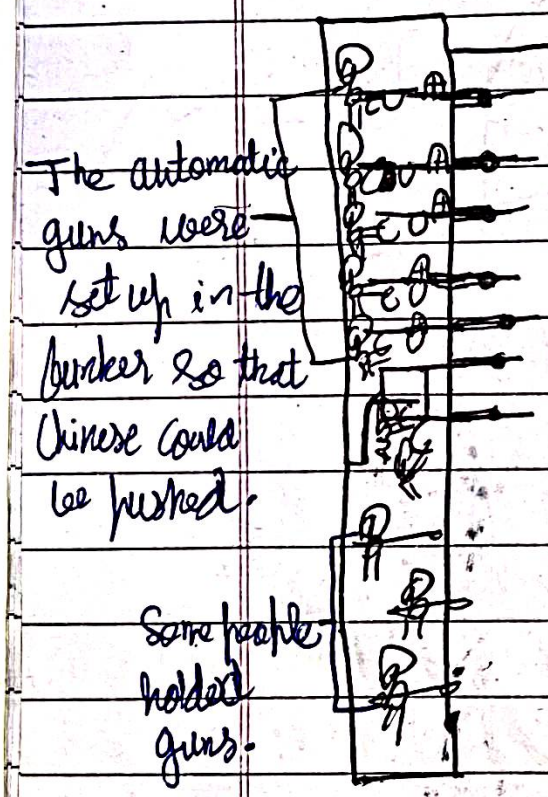
-> About the Aircraft
This ~~air~~ aircraft was desinged by the Sukhoi bureau in Russia (Soviet Union) This has a capacity of 2 ground bombs and 2 air to air missiles. Cost of one jet was $2\frac{1}{2}$ million dollars.

-> P 900 tanks



→ The warfare used by the Indian Army used trunks and they had built deep bunkers in the mountain as the war was spread over the state of sikkim in zet afog Pass.

• This was a kind of a bunker:



→ Disadvantages of the bunker

→ The bunker had several disadvantages, the bunker was not too strong and very small.

→ It was clearly very difficult to destroy the chinese troops as they walked strategically but they would be destroyed.

→ The bunker was very small only one small gernade of chinese origin could kill the people.
